A YANKEE'S VICTORY.

How the British Fleet was Thwarted with a Cow-Hide.

During the war of 1812 a Montauk cattle-keeper gained a signal victory over the English fleet, then lying in Gardiner's Bay, under command of Admiral Hardy. Montauk, according to the Sag Harbor (L. I.) Express, was then a commons for the towns of East and Southampton. These townspeople pastured 1,000 or 1,300 head of cattle on Montauk during the summer. These cattle were in charge of three keepers who lived about three miles apart. I think the name of the keeper in question was Paine. He conquered the English fleet with a canoe, a rawhide and a crew of one Indian. It came thus about:

The English had come ashore in their boats and killed one of the cattle in his charge. They wanted fresh meat and they got it. Mr. Paine did not propose that his herds should be thus ravaged with impunity. He armed himself with a rawhide. Next he found an Indian. He impressed the Indian with his rawhide and forced him to paddle off to the Admiral's ship. Mr. Paine was hailed from the ship and asked what he wanted. He said he wanted to come on board. He was allowed to come on board.

He was then asked what he wanted. He wanted to see the Admiral. What did he want to see the Admiral for? To be paid for one of the cattle in his care which had been slain by the Admiral's people. What was he going to do about it in case he was not paid? He inquired. Well, he was going to take it out of the English fleet. What was he going to take it out of with? With his rawhide!

The Admiral was informed that a Yankee was on board threatening to lick the fleet with an avenger of one canoe, one Indian and a rawhide. The Admiral was not alarmed, but he was amused and interested. He came on deck in his cocked hat and escalette and all the glitter and glory of the titled British tar of eighty odd years ago. The Admiral and Mr. Paine confronted each other. Mr. Paine did not back down. He repeated his demand and his threat.

"Well," said the Admiral, you are the bravest Yankee I've seen yet.
He ordered him to be paid. Mr. Paine received the value of the slain beast in hard, shining, yellow, British gold. Then with his force he rowed ashore, having gained a brave but bloodless victory.

AN UGLY ENCOUNTER.

Two Large Bears About as Much as Three Men Care to Handle.

The writer, while staying in the mountains near Bismarck, Saguache County, Col., in the winters of 1882, 1883 and 1884, enjoyed no better sport, with his two trusty companions, James Mathews and Sye Richards, than hunting the bear and deer and having an occasional adventure with wolves. Of our many adventures I will state one in particular. As our rude cabin was situated almost in the center of our hunting grounds we needed no more assistance than our own muscular strength could afford in carrying our game from the place of slaughter to the cabin. One fine morning in February as we were starting out for a hunt with our rifles shouldered and our hunting-knives in our belts we spied a very large bear's tracks, and there began the trail at once. We had not gone far until we saw by the tracks in the snow that the bear had been joined by another one equally as large. I cautioned the boys to be on the lookout. We had not gone more than twenty rods when, to our great surprise, both bears sprung from behind a great mound not more than twenty feet in advance of us. I, being the head one, quickly discharged my rifle, the ball just grazing the shoulder of one of the bears, which only added to the fury of both. Both bears were now coming at us with ferocity. James and Sye both fired, but in their excitement and hurry both missed their aim. As the first bear was in reach of me, I continued the writer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, I dealt him a stunning blow with the butt of my rifle, breaking it and causing him to stagger about in bewilderment. Before I had time to draw my hunting-knife the second bear gave me a powerful blow on the breast, knocking me senseless to the ground. James and Sye now had the fight to themselves. They were prepared, however, and as brute came at them James struck him across the nose with his hunting-knife, causing him great pain.

Almost at the same instant the brute struck with his right paw, knocking him to the ground. Sye, who was not a coward, sprung to the left of the brute and sunk his knife into the bear's heart. James was now upon his feet, while the other bear was eyeing them with savage growls. "Jim, for heaven's sake load your rifle as quick as possible while I watch the angry brute," exclaimed Sye. As James had his rifle almost loaded the bear sprung at Sye unexpectedly and knocked him down. But the load from Jim's rifle put an end to the struggle. How we got home I do not know, nor do I know how we knew a new great deal about it. As soon as we were able to leave our cabin we went to Bismarck and purchased three Winchester repeating rifles, and made the boast that we were not then afraid of attacking any five bears.

What Would Stop Them.

A particularly vigorous speaker at a woman's rights meeting waving her long arms like the sails of a wind-mill, asked: "If the women of this country were to rise up in their thousands and march to the polls I should like to know what there is on this earth that could stop them?" And in the momentary silence which followed the speaker a still, small voice remarked: "A mouse!"

THEATRICAL KISSING.

"The first play I ever appeared in," said Miss Kidder, to a Toledo Blade man, "was 'Under the Gaslight,' but my part did not call for kissing of any description. In 'Nordeck' I was supposed to be kissed, but it all ended in supposition. I forget whether I was kissed in 'Davy Crockett' or whether we again deceived confiding audiences. My first real kissing experience on the stage was in England during a tour of the provinces. This experience became vividly impressed on my memory on account of the attendant circumstances during the first night of the play.

"The scene calls for us to kiss here. Do you object to my actually kissing you?" "I was very much surprised at being asked such a question, and told him that I had not the slightest objection; that I regarded a kiss as a piece of stage business which called for as faithful reproduction as any other piece of stage business. I forgot the name of the town we opened in, but I can never forget my experience that night, as it gave me my first acquaintance with the peculiar methods of an English audience.

"I had a love scene in the first act. I was seated on a sofa, with my face toward the audience, and my lover stood at the back of the sofa. At the point in the scene where he declared his love, and I had accepted him, he leaned over and kissed me. There immediately rose from the audience such a confused medley of sounds as I had never heard before in my life. From all over the house came sounds strikingly suggestive of smacking the lips, and a long-drawn out m-m-m-m. I was so indignant and ashamed I could hardly speak my lines, and when I came off the stage I repaired at once to the stage manager and demanded to know what he meant by allowing me to go through a piece of business which he knew would be grieved. His answer was to me, as an American, a genuine surprise.

"Why, Lord bless me! They weren't grieved. That's the way they show their approval of the scene."

"I made up my mind they wouldn't have another opportunity of manifesting their approval in the same way, and the next night I had the kiss cut out.

"I do not feel the slightest delicacy about kissing on the stage, nor do I have the slightest objection to being kissed. I think you will find very few actresses who have it regarded purely as an act of business by both men and women."

5 O'CLOCK EDITION.

THE Free Traders have been squirming badly ever since the worsted decision was announced. They do not recover from it, and their organs—the New York Times, and Post—continue to fill their columns with futile efforts to prove that the decision is wrong. So long as their arguments are honest no one can object, even if they are tiresome; but when they begin and end with false statements it is time to denounce them. It cannot be hoped that the few devotees who worship at these free trade altars will listen to proofs of the errors of their priests. But others may be misled by them, and therefore we take some time and space to expose them.

In the Post of the 28th of June a column begins with a gross error and ends with a false statement. It charges in the beginning that the worsted decision "increases the tax on worsted clothing by 19 per cent., without consent of Congress." It is not true that it increases the tax on worsted clothing 19 per cent. The percentage represents the difference in the average rate of duty in former years on woolens and worsteds costing abroad 80 cents per pound, and so far as clothing may be made of worsted cloth costing under 80 cents per pound the duty-paid cost of the cloth might be increased by the decision 19 per cent. But there is no increase in the cost of manufacture of cloth. This cost of manufacture and materials may be roughly estimated at one-half the cost of the garment. Hence the increase of 19 per cent would, if averaged on the complete garment, amount to 8 1/2 per cent. In this assertion, therefore, the Post is only 100 per cent. out of the way.

The American Economist, in commenting on the same article, has this to say:

"As to the statement that this increase of 8 1/2 per cent. on the cost of the garment made of worsted cloth was 'without the assent of Congress,' the decision was framed to determine what was the true meaning of an act of Congress. The method of reaching the determination was in accordance with the specific directions of Congress, and having thus legally defined the meaning of the act, its definition becomes the act itself, until ruled upon by a higher authority. Therefore the charge that the increase of duty is without the assent of Congress is radically false.

The column of argument and assertion starting with these false premises concludes with another false assertion, which is almost unparalleled among the unveracities which have distinguished the Post above all other American journals. It states that the Administration pleads that it has 'decided in favor of the increased customs taxes on worsted clothing only in order that the courts may get jurisdiction.' The truth is that in the course of seven lines out of a decision covering eight pages in this so-called 'plea' alluded to, and it forms no part of the statement or argument on which the Secretary's decision is founded. It is utterly false to assert, as does the writer in the Post, that the decision was made only in order that the judicial construction may be had. What the Secretary says, and it is practically all he says on this point, is that it is 'only in this way [by imposing the higher rate of duty] that judicial construction may be had.'

What confidence is due to a writer who thus deliberately misrepresents and perverts the facts upon which his conclusions rest? Manifestly none at all; and he condemns himself as unworthy of confidence in all other respects.

This article of the 28th of June is supplemented by another on the 29th with reference to a recent decision of Judge Blodgett, of the Circuit Court at Chicago. The Post seeks to have it understood that the worsted case had already been before the courts and been passed upon judicially, and therefore that the Secretary had been guilty of overruling the decisions of the court as well as the act of Congress by his recent decision.

This is another case of misrepresentation. Secretary Fairchild had decided that worsted cloths made with an admixture of wool shoddy were, in fact, part wool, and therefore liable to a higher rate of duty. The importer appealed, claiming that wool shoddy was not wool, and therefore that the goods should come in at a lower rate provided for all-worsted goods. Judge Blodgett sustained the importer. The general question of the construction or interpretation of the worsted clause of the tariff did not come before him, and it may be said further that Circuit Judge Lacombe of this city has lately had the same question before him which came before Judge Blodgett and gave a decision diametrically opposed to that of Judge Blodgett.

To pursue and expose all the errors, intentional or otherwise, of the free-trade press would be an endless task, for there is no limit or bound to the field of untruth, and it is reasonable to believe that readers of even ordinary intelligence will do them justice."

SAYS Fred Douglas in a letter to the Washington Post: "While I neither asked, sought, nor expected to be appointed Minister to this important country, I have no sympathy with those who endeavor to belittle the appointment or question the motives of President Harrison in making it. I know of no place on the globe where I could be more usefully employed than in the discharge of the duties which will naturally devolve upon me should I reach Port au Prince."

Kilrain's Condition.

CHICAGO, July 15.—Last night Jake Kilrain stripped to the skin and was closely examined by a reporter, who could find no mark upon him anywhere, not even a discoloration of the skin. Kilrain declared that he was not seriously punished by Sullivan; that the hot sun had more to do with his poor showing than Sullivan's blows. "I just weakened and died away, and that is all there was to it," is the way Jake put it. He says he may go to California to try for some of the big purses they offer there. He says he can't say whether he will go against Peter Jackson or not.

The Great Salt Trust.

MILWAUKEE, July 15.—E. D. Wheeler of Manitowish, Mich., one of the most prominent salt manufacturers in the West, who is in Milwaukee, gives the outline of the plans of the proposed International Salt Trust Association, to be organized with a capital of $20,000,000, and which will be incorporated under the laws of New York. The Association will begin business on January 1st. Burt, the defeated candidate for Governor of Michigan, will be the first president. Of the stock, $8,000,000 will be held by English capitalists.

Called on the Governor.

JACKSON, Miss., July 15.—John Fitzpatrick of New Orleans, the referee in the Sullivan-Kilrain fight, arrived here last night. He went to the Governor's office this morning and informed him that he came to answer to whatever charge might be lodged against him for violating the laws of Mississippi. The preliminaries were waived and Fitzpatrick gave a bond of $1,000 to appear at Purvis on the 13th instant.

The Blythe Estate.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 15.—The contest over the property of the late Thomas H. Blythe commenced in the Probate Court this morning. It promises to be one of the most celebrated cases ever brought before the courts of this State, as the property involved is valued at about $4,000,000 and the claimants number over 200 persons.

Greatly Hampered.

CARMO, July 15.—Colonel Wodehouse, commander of the Egyptian troops which have been following the Dervishes, telegraphs that the movements of his troops are greatly hampered by the fact he has made provisions for a host of prisoners, sick and wounded. Two guns have been taken, which were abandoned by the Dervishes.

A Remarkable Transaction.

STANTON, Va., July 15.—James A. Patterson Jr. of Waynesboro, made an assignment to-day; assets over $60,000 and debts less than $1,000. Patterson owned and operated the largest flouring mill in the valley. He has left the country, and no reason is assigned for his absence or assignment. He was a very prominent and influential citizen.

A Mississippi Lynching.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 15.—Yesterday morning Sawn Buris, a negro charged with the murder of a white man named Whiteburst, was lynched at Iuka, Miss. A mob of 100 men forced the jailer to give up the keys and took Buris a short distance and hanged him to a tree.

An Eastern Storm.

CINCINNATI, July 15.—Reports from Princeton to-day, concerning the storm of yesterday, indicate that there is no loss of life. The loss of property, it is estimated, will not exceed $10,000. The damage of crops, fences, etc., is very great in the pathway of the storm, which is about a quarter of a mile.

Fatal Collision.

PARIS, July 15.—A collision occurred at Grenoble to-day between a passenger train and a freight train on the Paris, Lyons & Mediterranean Railroad, in which twenty persons were killed or injured.

A Prosperous State.

The fruit crop of California this year is estimated to be worth $24,000,000. The wheat crop $32,000,000. Wool is worth $6,000,000. Dairy products $7,500,000. The wine is valued at $4,000,000. Vegetables at $3,000,000. Total $74,000,000.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCHES TO THE GAZETTE.]

Heavy Exportation of Beef.

CHICAGO, July 15.—Arrangements have been made for the exportation of an unusually large number of cattle within the next three or four months. Nelson Morris, a heavy cattle dealer of this city, has secured all the vacant space on all of the outgoing steamers from New York for Liverpool, Glasgow and London for a period of two or three months.

J. L. Hathaway of Boston and his syndicate have engaged all the room on the steamers of the Warren Line, from Boston, for July, August and September. Myer Goldsmith of New York has engaged the same line of steamers for October.

The reason for this heavy export is the low price here and the shortage of the European cattle crop and consequent high prices there. The first consignment this season of range cattle arrived here this morning. They are from the ranch of Pierre Lieux, and consist of nine carloads of steers and six carloads of cows. They were shipped at Mingusville, Mont.

Another Chinese Case.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Acting Secretary Batchelor had a telegraphic communication with C. P. Huntington, President of the Southern Pacific railroad, to-day in regard to the case of twelve Chinese coolies who recently arrived at New Orleans enroute to China via San Francisco. The collector held that their landing was prohibited by the Chinese exclusion act, while the railroad contended that they were entitled to the privilege of transit through the United States as tourists. Acting Secretary Batchelor informed Mr. Huntington that the collector's action is in accordance with the previous decisions of the department, but he would comply with the request of the transportation company to postpone further action until the question can be presented in a diplomatic way through the Chinese legation at Washington. In the meantime the collector is instructed to detain the Chinese, but not to allow them to land.

An Injunction Asked.

CHICAGO, July 15.—The Earl Fruit Company of California this morning commenced a suit for an injunction in the U. S. Circuit Court against Adams & Lewis, an auction company of this city. The fruit company sends its fruit, valued at $500,000 yearly, to Chicago. The market is made by means of auction which the defendant and others carry on, yet, notwithstanding that nearly all the plaintiff's fruit is consigned to it, the defendant refuses to admit the plaintiff's agent to attend the sale. When their agent, M. Frey, goes to the place he is forcibly ejected. This, it is alleged, is because a rival fruit-growing company is backing the auction company. An injunction is asked restraining the auction company from ejecting Frey at the time of public sales.

NEW YORK, July 15.—The celebration of the 100th anniversary of the fall of the Bastille was begun yesterday by the Frenchmen of this city and continued to-day. The French societies paraded, and were reviewed by Mayor Grant, and spent the rest of the day in picnics and games at Jones' Woods. SAN FRANCISCO, July 15.—The celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the fall of the Bastille was continued to-day. The French military and civic acts, assisted by a number of companies of State militia, held a parade this afternoon, which was followed by literary exercises in the Grand Opera House.

Denied by Blaine.

NEW YORK, July 15.—A special from Bar Harbor says that Secretary Blaine denies with his own lips the story of his resignation sent out from Washington Saturday night. BAR HARBOR, Me., July 15.—The reported resignation of Secretary Blaine is positively denied by Walker Blaine, who is here to consult the Secretary upon matters pertaining to the State Department. Blaine's health is said to be good.

Democratic Economy.
A Phoenix, A. T., dispatch of the 13th inst. reads as follows: Governor Wolfley, in examining into the expenses of the late Democratic administration in this Territory, has made the discovery that nearly a quarter of a million dollars has been drawn from the general fund of the Territory over and above the ordinary expenses of the Government within the past two years. The discovery has made considerable of a sensation within political circles. The Herald says an investigation will be made and an attempt to fix the ways and means by which the thing was accomplished, as well as to fix the identity of the recipients of this great overdraft on the treasury.

A Cigarette Victim.
In Mason Valley a few days ago a young man by the name of Chester Holland died of consumption, said to have been brought on by excessive cigarette smoking. There is some satisfaction in knowing that a large majority of those addicted to the cigarette habit are not worth saving.

Timely Advice.

Let us give the readers of the GAZETTE a little timely advice. Hot weather is coming and with it cholera, cholera morbus, dysentery, diarrhoea. The only safe way to combat these diseases, is to keep the bowels at hand, and all who have tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy will admit that it is the most prompt, reliable and successful medicine known for these complaints. It costs but 25 or 50 cents and may be the means of saving you or your family much suffering, if not life itself, before the summer is over. For sale by Osburn & Shoemaker.

A. Nelson, the enterprising free employment office agent, and well-known for his fine cigars, tobacco, pipes and yankee notions, has taken the agency for Dr. Wiley's Discovery, the greatest liniment on earth, for rheumatism, coughs, colds, catarrh, asthma and bronchial affections. Also a full line of "Diamond" spectacles and eyeglasses. I buy goods as cheaply as anyone in Reno and can therefore defy competition.

We have a speedy and positive Cure for Catarrh, Diphtheria, Canker Mouth and Headache, in SHILOH'S CATARRH REMEDY. A Nasal Injector free with every bottle. Use it if you desire health and sweet breath. Price 50 cents. Sold by Osburn & Shoemaker.

Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint.
Is it not worth the small price of 75 cents to free yourself of every symptom of these distressing complaints? If you think so call at our store and get a bottle of Shilo's Bile Beans. Every bottle has a printed guarantee on it; use accordingly, and if it does you no good it will cost you nothing. Sold by Osburn & Shoemaker.

O, What a Cough.
Will you heed the warning. The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that terrible disease, Consumption. Ask your selves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50 cents, to run the risk of losing your life. We know from experience that Shilo's Cure will cure your cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a million bottles were sold the past year. It relieves Croup and Whooping Cough at once. Mothers do not be without it for Lambs Back, Sore Throat, Chest, use Shilo's Porous Plaster. Sold by Osburn & Shoemaker.

Electric Bitters.
This remedy is becoming so well known and so popular as to need no special mention. All who have used Electric Bitters sing the same song of praise. A purer medicine does not exist and it is guaranteed to do all that is claimed. Electric Bitters will cure all diseases of the liver and kidneys, will remove pimples, boils, salt rheum and other affections caused by impure blood. Will drive malaria from the system and prevent as well as cure all Malarial fevers. For cure of Headache, Constipation and Indigestion try Electric Bitters. Entire satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Price, 50 cents, and $1 per bottle at Hodgkinson's drug store.

Consumption Incurable?
Read the following: Mr. C. H. Morris, Newark, Ark., says: "Was down with Abscess of Lung, and friends and physicians pronounced me an incurable consumptive. Began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, am now on my third bottle, and able to oversee the work on my farm. This is the finest medicine ever made." Jesse Middleton, Decatur, Ohio, says: "Had it not been for Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption I would have died of lung troubles; was given up by doctors; am now in best of health." Try it. Sample bottles free at Hodgkinson's drug store.

Notice.

FISH LADDERS.

Attention of Mr. Mills Called to the Matter.
Fish Commissioner Mills visited Reno several times in the interest of the fishy tribe last Spring. At his instance prosecutions were had that stopped the Indians from spearing fish. The matter of fish ladders was discussed between him and several of the citizens of Reno who believe in having the fish make their annual trip up the Truckee. It was understood that as soon as the water in the river was low enough to make it practical the Commissioner would give attention to fish ladders and require those who dam the Truckee to put in proper ladders near the center of these dams, so that the fish could travel up stream without being interfered with by Indians or whites, or spears in the hands of either. There is probably no better time for that work than now. The river is naturally low, and the several ditch owners are availing themselves of every inch of water obtainable. If any work is required to be done toward the fish interest by way of putting in ladders in the center of dams, it would be well to have it so understood, so that those maintaining dams can do the work when the river is at its lowest stage, which is about now, when all the water is drawn therefrom for irrigating purposes.

HE LIT OUT.

The District Attorney and Constable Engage in a Discussion and Let a Prisoner Get Away.
An amusing incident occurred in the Justice Court a few days since that makes Constable Upson blush when it is alluded to. They had a fellow up for disturbing the peace, when the Constable and District Attorney got into quite a heated discussion as to the guilt or innocence of the man, who took advantage of the excitement, made his way to the sidewalk and lit out like a quarter horse. The J. P. finally discovered that the fellow was gone, and the Constable and District Attorney repaired to the street, only to see his coat tails going around the corner.
MORAL.—The prisoner should be chained to a table if the officers of the Court are going to overlook him in their discussions.

RENO HOTELS.

It is rumored that a four story brick hotel is to be built on the old theater corner by a syndicate of San Francisco capitalists. It would be a choice location and fill a long-felt want.
Speaking of hotels, why would not one built on the corner of Virginia and Second streets, on the old Atlantic corner, be a good investment? It would certainly increase the value of property in that vicinity, add much to the appearance of the town and be an accommodation to the public, and the GAZETTE believes it would be a paying investment.

A DANGEROUS RUNAWAY.

John R. Vail of Virginia with his wife and child went out driving with a horse and cart in that city Saturday, when the horse caught the line with his tail and started to run. Mr. Vail reached forward to extricate the line, when the horse kicked him in the breast, knocking him out of the cart and continued in his mad career until the cart struck a lamp post, throwing Mrs. Vail and the child violently to the ground. Besides cutting them up some on the sharp rocks, they were not seriously injured, but their escape was almost miraculous.

A Hitch in the Proceedings.

About sixty picnics went to Carson yesterday to attend the Chosen Friends' picnic. When they were about ready to start it was discovered that the committee had failed to make any arrangements with the railroad company for transportation. After a detention of about twenty minutes and doing much telegraphing, General Ticket Agent Decker finally concluded to honor the tickets and make arrangements afterwards.

Fighting Tramps.

Last Saturday a couple of tramps belonging to a gang of eight or ten had a misunderstanding, which resulted in the formation of a prize ring near the plaining mill, where they proceeded to pummel each other according to the Marquis of Queensbury rules. The appearance of officers Upson and Peers stopped the sport. One of the principals, after being badly battered, was lodged in jail.

A Good Investment.

Much speculation was indulged in when Manager Booton commenced the construction of McKissick's Opera House as to what induced him to lay out so much money in a dead enterprise—one that would not pay a single dollar on the investment. But, as it has paid its taxes and insurance and netted Mr. McKissick $2,300—over 14 percent interest—the people no longer wonder at Mr. Booton's "folly."

English Speaking People.

It is estimated that the English speaking people occupy one fourth of the dry land of the earth, and that more than one half of the letters mailed and carried by the postal service of the world are written, mailed and read by the English speaking population.

Real Estate Transfer.

On Saturday D. H. Haskell sold John Pothoff a lot 100x145 just across the alley south of the old theater site, facing Center street, and Mr. Pothoff commenced this morning the construction of a two-story brick livery stable thereon. He paid $4,000 for it.

Over the River.

The Justice of the Peace sent six toughs over the river to-day for 15 days each for fighting. After they whipped each other they started in to clean up the town and got caught at it with the result as stated.

DEATH OF DR. WATERS.

The Narrative of His Sensations as Told by Himself.
A New York dispatch of the 10th inst. contains an account of the death of Dr. J. W. Waters, formerly of Carson, who committed suicide in that city last Sunday evening, and shows how an educated man, a scientist and physician, feels while trying to end his life with repeated doses of poison, his sensations and experiences, as told in an extraordinary narrative left by him. The record of his forty-eight hours' experiment with death is contained in a letter found in his room. It is addressed to his friend, Dr. G. W. Wells, one of the medical examiners of the Mutual Life Insurance Company. It is as cold-blooded and scientific as the report of a chemical analysis.

The letter to Dr. Wells is a detailed account of his sensations after he had swallowed poison enough to kill three ordinary men. He intended that it should be a contribution to medical science. He wrote it as Pasteur might write of an inoculation experiment on dogs. For more than thirty-six hours he endured the agony the poison caused him. Although his hand trembled so much that much of his writing was almost illegible, he coolly jotted down his observations on the effects of poison. It failed to kill him, and he put an end to the horrible tragedy with two shots from a revolver. The record begins in this fashion:

"I took, as near as I can estimate, fifty-eight grains of morphine between 10 and 12 o'clock Friday night. My syringe only holds an ounce. The entire number of injections was fifty-four, and I drank three and one-half ounces of the solution."

At 2 o'clock he writes that the morphine has not produced any soporific effect, but his skin has been covered with "an itching, prickling rash." His hand shakes so that he can scarcely write. He feels nauseated, but his stomach is empty. His system is completely relaxed, the perspiration profuse, and the pulse "rapid, rarely falling below 100, but varying so far from minute to minute that I hardly know how to characterize it."

At 4 o'clock he writes: "I can scarcely believe that such a dose can fail to prove effective."
A little later: "There is no case on record of recovery from such a dose. Can it be that it will fail?"

At 10 o'clock Saturday morning he notes that it is twelve hours since he took the dose, and expresses surprise that he still lives.
At 2 o'clock he begins to think of taking cocaine. "I do not know the effect of cocaine," he adds, "and fear it would not be deadly enough for my purpose; but I must try it and take the chances." He takes five drops and records profuse perspiration and aggravated nausea.

STILL HOPING FOR DEATH.

At 11:30 his stomach ejected some ten or twelve ounces of dark green bile, which affords him "some relief." He finds his head "dizzy" but his hand "steady." He comforts himself with the reflection that on previous occasions when he had taken morphine the soporific effects did not follow until twenty-four hours afterwards, and adds: "It will be interesting to note the effects of the overwhelming dose taken last night when the time for soporific effect arrives."
At 4:20 he writes: "I presume no one else ever had so tedious an exit, and I am at a loss to understand it. Of course, I knew that I could take a large dose of morphine without danger, but that over fifty grains could be taken without proving promptly fatal never occurred to me, and I believe still it will prove fatal to-night, when the soporific effect comes on."
At 9 o'clock, twenty-three hours after taking the morphine, he experiences no soporific effect, and the morphine being all gone, takes more cocaine, and says: "I would like to know how much cocaine is required to cause death."

A little later he contemplates using a revolver. "I always had a dislike to shooting or stabbing or any mutilating," he writes. "It seems brutal, but I fear I must come to it. It seems that misfortune and failure attend my efforts even to end my existence. Now, if the cocaine fails, the revolver may also, for the cartridges are ten years old; but they have always been kept well wrapped in the original box, and may be good yet."

TURNING TO THE REVOLVER.

At 12 o'clock Saturday night he writes: "It is evident now that the morphine is a failure. I am very much disappointed and don't know what is best to do. The revolver would be, perhaps, best, but I have a strong prejudice against using it, and besides, it would alarm the house."
A little after 5 o'clock Sunday morning he writes: "I am sinking. If my feelings are any guide I shall not have to use the revolver. I can scarcely hold the pencil."
This follows at 6:30: "I am exceedingly sick and weak. This is anything but a pleasant way to end one's life. It's too tedious, painful and distressing. The nausea alone would be hard to bear, but when it is complicated with half a dozen other distressing symptoms it is indeed hard to bear, and I don't think I can stand it. If I don't die by 8 o'clock I shall use the revolver. One symptom I did not mention was inability to judge of distances. Everything appeared nearer to me than it was, and in taking up anything I invariably reached beyond it."

STILL PONDERING.

At 8:25: "I am very thirsty from profuse perspiration and water does not seem to agree with me."
"What would I not give for some good brandy or champagne now, if I had anything to give? I am a tough one, it seems. I wonder if a bullet through the heart will kill me, or one through the brain? I must try it, for I cannot endure this suffering any longer. It is now 8:50, and I am no nearer death than I was at 8 o'clock, when I appeared to be sinking."
This is the last entry:
"It is 9 o'clock Sunday morning, and I will wait for death no longer. I will try a revolver and see how that works. I expect a good and immediate result from that, if this trembling does not confuse my aim. I shall aim for the heart just below the fifth rib. You cannot expect one to tell the story very connectedly when he has taken so much poison as I have. I have been now thirty-six hours trying to kill myself and have not yet succeeded."
"It is now 9:10. The symptoms of dissolution are passing away. I want to use the pistol while still numb from cocaine. I am afraid my violent trembling may disarrange my aim, but I will steady the muzzle of the pistol on my breast, and so steady my hand. I am feeling horrible. No food has passed my lips for forty-eight hours, and my nervous system is in a state of complete prostration from enormous doses of the narcotic I have taken. I have no desire for food, and cannot have while the deadly nausea lasts."

shall aim for the heart just below the fifth rib. You cannot expect one to tell the story very connectedly when he has taken so much poison as I have. I have been now thirty-six hours trying to kill myself and have not yet succeeded."
"It is now 9:10. The symptoms of dissolution are passing away. I want to use the pistol while still numb from cocaine. I am afraid my violent trembling may disarrange my aim, but I will steady the muzzle of the pistol on my breast, and so steady my hand. I am feeling horrible. No food has passed my lips for forty-eight hours, and my nervous system is in a state of complete prostration from enormous doses of the narcotic I have taken. I have no desire for food, and cannot have while the deadly nausea lasts."

This was the last entry. According to Dr. Water's landlady, he was alive, seated at the table, apparently writing, at 6 o'clock on Sunday evening, when she took him some toast and tea. An hour later he was dead, with a bullet in his brain and through his heart.

Three Rebellions a Day.
Three rebellions, destined through bloodless, occur in the stomach of the dyspeptic who partakes of food thrice a day. The digestive organ refuses on each occasion to perform its duty assigned to it by nature and trouble ensues. How discipline, how regulate it? Simply with a winged shaft of the medicinal invigilant and appetizer, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters before each meal and before retiring. Digestion will, after a course of this pleasant regulator become easy, and its forerunner, appetite, also improve. Nervousness and insomnia, always induced by chronic dyspepsia, will disappear with its disappearance thus insured, and constipation and biliousness, its usual attendants, also take their leave. Not only will the system acquire strength, but also substance by a more perfect assimilation of the food. Rheumatism, malaria and kidney complaint and neuralgia yield to the Bitters.

HE FOLLOWED SUIT.
My wife has been under physician's care for two years, for what they called "liver complaint." She would get some relief while taking prescriptions, but would soon fall back into the same drowsy, inactive state. I got her a bottle of "The California Remedy," Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla. It did her immediate good, and when three bottles had been taken she regained her old accustomed health and spirits and is now as well as ever. Seeing the benefit she derived, I used it for rheumatism with the result that I am now entirely free from the disease with which I had suffered for over a year.

THE RANCHMAN'S DAUGHTER.

She seems indeed the child of grace. With perfect form and winning face In which no vanity I trace Beyond the natural beauty of her face; And very modest, good and kind, In this sweet strain to my mind, Add not a fault to her to find In the ranchman's pretty daughter.

She rides her horse with perfect ease. Can kill a deer where'er she please. And knows the names of flowers and trees, And sings the songs sweet birds have taught her.

The fish all come to seize her hook. She takes the fishes in the brook, And now my heart is also won By the ranchman's pretty daughter.

She rules the kitchen like a queen And keeps the house so neat and clean There's not a cobweb to be seen, So swift her hands that never falter. Her voice clear as a honey well, Her lips as sweet as honey well, There's lots more things I'd like to tell Of the ranchman's pretty daughter.

I am to elope with mine some day, And take her miles and miles away, To my fair home upon the bay, Across the ocean's blue and wide, And then with arms I'll deck her brow And worship her as I do now, The ranchman's pretty daughter.

IN AN ALPINE PASS.

The Monk Francesco and the Twin Brothers.

"A bad night!" said the monk Francesco, as he went to the door of the hospice where great St. Bernard passed and looked out on the white, wintry scene. He stepped into the path shrouded through the drifts around the door, but did not venture far. The air had the keenness of a knife, as if it had been sharpened by ceaseless rubbing against the great white cliffs that towered in every direction.

"Yes, a bad night!" said Francesco again. "It will be dark soon."

He looked along the line of utter and Arctic dreariness, known as the Great St. Bernard pass, to distinguish it from the Little St. Bernard, along which Hannibal is thought to have led his troops into Italy. It was the whiteness of the snow everywhere. Few were the foot-prints of any thing human in the Great St. Bernard. Francesco suddenly turned with startled air.

Was that the boom of the cannon he heard? No, it was the thunder of an avalanche, loosened on a neighboring mountain slope and now discharged into the valley. This cannon-like report suggested to Francesco the time Napoleon forced his way through this defile. He took off his guns from their carriages. He laid them in logs roughly hollowed. To each gun—loaded long—a hundred men were attached. Up, up, went the invincible army. The songs of the French braves echoed along the edge of the dizzy cliffs. Did any point in the way seem invincible? They attacked it with their huzzas and their trumpet blasts, and on swept the grand army of the Little Corporal. Did Francesco catch in the hoarse cry of the wind among the crags the echoes of the French trumpet? Francesco was an Italian. What did he care for French associations? He shivered, shuddered his shoulders and turned away from the contemplation of the drifts of slabs in the road and the towering peaks that abraded out of sight as the twilight flung over them the drapery of its shadows. He contemplated with relief the stone building that was the hospice and his home. He thought with affection of St. Bernard of Nosta living in the tenth century. Witnessing the trials of pilgrims journeying over the Alps, he planted two hospitals, houses of refuge, in the two exposed passages that we know as the Great and Little St. Bernard. These hospices were intrusted to the care of the order of St. Augustine. That is the Great St. Bernard enjoys, if it be so, the reputation of a location higher than that of any other habitation in Europe. The pass is over eight thousand feet high, an elevation cool enough to satisfy the ambition of any reasonable Arctic traveler, and, if unreasonable, his ideas are not worthy of attention. Francesco had found it cold enough to worry uncomfortably his lungs, and the wearing life of the hospice had tested thoroughly his devotion to the great order of which he was a humble part.

As Francesco entered the hospice, he met in the doorway a monk lately arrived from Aosta and known to the brotherhood as Antonio. He was handling the rosary dangling from his waist, and was apparently so absorbed in that light occupation that he did not notice Francesco. The two monks passed one another in silence. Looking back in a moment, Francesco saw Antonio staring out of the door on the white, snow-covered pass, as if expecting somebody. "He had eyes only for his rosary when I passed him," thought Francesco. "He is a queer man and lives in a kind of dream-land all the time. I have seen him before. I believe it is he." The mysterious "he" was a treacherous friend of former years. Moved by curiosity, not by a desire to bring an old debtor to a sense of his indebtedness and take any payment for it, Francesco had already questioned Antonio.

"Are our friends well down in Aosta?" inquired Francesco.

"Ours!" replied the sharp-featured stranger. He had a thin, peaked face, with pointed chin. He looked like a V in a snow, "I—I—hope so."

"Hedoesn't seem to know any body," thought Francesco. "I'll try him again." He cleared his throat as if he were shoveling snow in the pass out of the way, and began again.

"Ahem—well! I used to live in Aosta."

"Did you?" replied Antonio, without ceremony.

"Yes, and I had a strange experience there," remarked Francesco. "That may start you," he thought. It started nothing, and Francesco went on. "I tried some money to a friend. That shows confidence, doesn't it?" Francesco closely scrutinized the imperturbable V inside the monk's owl before him.

"Yes, but money we have nothing to do with," said the stranger.

"That was before I was a monk, years ago, in the year —," Francesco halted again and looked at his companion. Antonio's face was calm as ever. "My friend squandered my money, threw it away, you may say. I showed him his fault and he said, 'Punished him!' carelessly inquired Antonio, not lifting his eyes.

"I told him that I hoped some day to be able to return good for evil, and that we should meet again." Then sharpening his gaze, Francesco said silently: "And—we have met."

Antonio did not seem to think any thing of the kind, for he quietly remarked, fastening his eyes on his rosary: "You were very kind." Then he softly glided away to his cell, and like a shadow slipped into the shadow of his plain, bare wall.

"He takes it very quietly," said Francesco, "but that is the man. The very face, the same eyes, the same pointed chin! Ha!" he suddenly exclaimed. "There are the dogs! I must look after them!"

Thinking it would be more profitable to attend to these four-footed creatures than to try to discover the two-footed unknown from Aosta, he left the spot. "Come here, Hugh!" he said, affectionately, to a big St. Bernard dog. "It is time to start you on your travels. Good-bye! Do your best, now!"

THE MONK AGAIN.

It will snow again this morn., or I am much mistaken.

The creature he addressed was a fine specimen of his race. His total length was about six feet. His splendid, massive head had a girth of twenty-six inches. He lacked only a few inches of a height of three feet as the shoulder. It would have taken a tape line of forty inches to measure the girth of his chest, while his weight was 150 pounds. In color he was of a tawny-brindle. He had a collar and chest, muzzle, feet and tip of tail were white. He rubbed his cold nose against the monk's warm head, and the look out of his dark, steadfast eyes said: "I am only a dog, but you can trust me."

The monk again addressed the dog. "Hugh, there! I have tied this flask of brandy round your neck and strapped this blanket about your body. If you find some poor fellow half-frozen in the snow, these may keep the life in him. You will godown the pass, look round carefully you know, and you bark if you find any body and he can't keep you company to the hospice. Now I will go to the door with you. There! Good-bye, sir!"

"Ah! snowing!" exclaimed Francesco, reaching out his hand and feeling a snow-flake. "Getting dark! Bah! It is chilly." He turned back into the hospice, but soon came to the door again and looked out. Hark! What did he hear?

"That is Hugh!" excitedly cried Francesco. At once, bundling himself up, he went out into the storm, lantern in hand. Others from the hospice promised to follow as quickly as possible. So dark and cold and desolate!

Francesco that poor fellow in the snow, I don't suppose there is any one down the pass for miles," thought Francesco, and over in the mountains, what wintry solitude!

"Boo-h-h!" roared the wind, shooting a volley of snow into his face. "Boo-h-h." This was much as to say: "What do you want to venture out for, then!"

Through the drifted snow, urged by the echoing, pitiful cry of Hugh, Francesco toiled forward. Nearer and nearer, sounded the loud howl of the dog, and at last Francesco saw the black form of the canine sentinel.

"What, another dog?" cried Francesco, detecting a second form. Yes, it was Peter, Hugh's brother, who had tipped up his nose, thrown back his head, and now gave an agonizing howl.

"Quiet, there! Here I am, and where's the man?" asked Francesco.

The dogs did not budge toward the monk, but stayed on guard where their charge was, only wagging their long, bushy tails in recognition of the monk's arrival. His lantern revealed the presence of a half-buried object between the dogs.

"That is he!" said Francesco excitedly, hastening forward. He lifted the traveler, held to his white, cold-face the lantern to see if any look of life might be there, held to the traveler's mouth a flask, and then quickly saw the restorative taking effect. The man decamely opened his eyes and uttered a few incoherent words.

"Home, home!" shouted Francesco to the dogs, and at the same time lifted in his powerful arms the helpless form that he had gathered out of the snow. A little way up the pass, Francesco met a band of his brother-monks, and so out of the cold, out of the night, out of the storm, the dogs barking joyfully and leaping frantically, the half-frozen traveler was borne with the walls of the strong, scattering hospice home.

"We will look after the man," said a brother-monk, thoughtfully, to Francesco. "You had quite a tug with him."

"Oh, no," Francesco, modestly, but secretly rejoicing in his powerful frame and great endurance. "I must take a turn outside once more."

He faced the storm in the pass, but saw nothing and heard nothing, and again entered the hospice. On his way to his cell, he passed the open door of Antonio's simple quarters. He halted. Was that Antonio on the bed? Was the monk sick? There was that pale, peaked face pressing silently the pillow. Francesco stepped into the cell. "How much," thought Francesco, "he does look like that treacherous friend!"

"He said aloud: 'Are you sick? I am sorry.'"

No voice could be more sympathetic than Francesco's. Tears shone in the eyes turned up from the humble pillow.

"You have done much already," said Francesco. "I am very sorry. You were kind to me."

"Oh—oh—let it go!" cried Francesco. "It is all forgiven. I am very sorry you are sick. What can I do for you?"

"You have done much already," said Francesco. "I am very sorry. You were kind to me."

"Oh—oh—let it go!" cried Francesco. "It is all forgiven. I am very sorry you are sick. What can I do for you?"

"You have done much already," said Francesco. "I am very sorry. You were kind to me."

"Oh—oh—let it go!" cried Francesco. "It is all forgiven. I am very sorry you are sick. What can I do for you?"

Now He Became Famous.

The Walker, Iowa, News, says: Our old friend, Robert Baird, of Muscatine, Iowa, has been Secretary of the State Senate, and an active politician for years, but was never generally known until he had the collar, and used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and got into one of their advertisements.

"Now, he is famous!" Here is what Mr. Baird said: "While I was in Des Moines, I was taken with a severe attack of bowel complaint. For two days I suffered intensely, trying several drug stores and paying them for relief, but in vain. I finally bought a small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and two doses of that brought me out all right. It costs less than the drug-store preparations and I have the balance for future use. I consider it a grand remedy." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Osburn & Shoemaker.

Oregon is one of the most productive States in the Union. Its vast mineral regions contain gold, silver, copper, iron and coal. Its immense tracts of land are well adapted for raising cattle and sheep, and its extensive agricultural regions produce all the cereals in abundance, the yield per acre being, in some instances, the largest in the world. Among the useful and valuable products of the Willamette State may be mentioned Oregon Kidney Tea, which has proved a boon to thousands afflicted with pain in the back and kidney difficulties. Its purely vegetable composition and never fails. Sold by William Finninger.

The immediate symptoms of Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, are a distressing sense of weight, oppression and fullness in the stomach, flatulency, loss of appetite, fever, breath, belching, flatulency, nausea, pain in the shoulders and breast. Dr. Henley's Dandelion Tonic promotes healthy digestion and removes all unhealthy symptoms. Sold by William Finninger.

This is the season of the year when the raw, cold winds create sad havoc with the hands and complexion. Soft, white hands and a clear "peachy" complexion can be assuredly preserved by the frequent application of Dettol's skin cream. It rubbed into the skin well it leaves no greasy surface. Thinksports it. Sold by William Finninger.

It should be generally known that Dr. Henley's Dandelion Tonic insures a hearty appetite and increased digestion, dispels nervous depression and low spirits, overcomes lack of energy and wakefulness, and will infuse new life and strength into the weakest invalid. Sold by William Finninger.
